Well done Ella, look how much

you've grown

Upstairs, in an incy wincy house there lived an incy wincy old man who woke up and had an incy wincy breakfast and got an incy wincy loaf of bread to feed his incy wincy ^{SP}lookers. His incy wincy house had 4 incy wincy windows and an incy wincy door. The incy wincy old man was a kind and generous old man who loved his tin animals more than anything. For breakfast, he had jam on toast, pancakes, banana with yogurt and cranberries and it was ^{SP}dilicious.

As the incy wincy door opened, the old man gasped in astonishment.
All he could see was flames, flames for miles and miles further than he could see. He ran inside his house to get a bucket he looked everywhere but he could not find any water. But then beneath the burning tin the ground started shaking and in the distance tsunami giant waves of water came it was a sunarmy^{SP} and it ~~was~~ put out the flames but it was to late the forest had fallen to ashes.

Slightly
long sentence
here 😊

Super
work, Ellal.

At last, the old man woke up but he couldn't stand the mess outside, so he went down the stairs and quickly grabbed his phone to call his friend, the little old lady to see what she would do.
Fife-teen minutes latter the old laddy came and called Fonny the builder and he came with 75 disrent pacs of seeds and a shovell. First he cleard out all the ashes. Then he planted the seeds. After that he waterd them and finaly he sed them. A ~~few~~ few day's latter, he had his very own real gorrest.
